End of the Road is a 1993 American comedy film directed by John Dahl, starring Chevy Chase, John Goodman, and John Cusack. The film is a parody of the 1970s and 1980s American comedy films, particularly those of the New Wave movement. It features a series of satirical sketches and a central plot involving a group of friends who are stranded in a remote location. The film was released on video in 1994 and has since become a cult classic.
